

Privacy Policy

This policy sets out the rules and obligations of Salus Mutual Insurance Company ("Salus Mutual" or the "Company") with regard to the collection, use, disclosure, and retention of personal information maintained in various Company record keeping systems and provides guidelines for administering this policy.

Salus Mutual's Privacy Policy is based on the ten principles adopted by the Personal Information Protection and Electronic Documents Act (PIPEDA), which are described in detail below.

Salus Mutual is committed to protecting the privacy and security of customers, suppliers, and employee records, and to meeting our obligations under Canadian data privacy laws, including PIPEDA and applicable provincial laws. We adhere to the privacy principles set out below which govern the way we collect, use, store, and disclose personal information that is obtained in the course of sales, promotion, and distribution of our products/services or in the course of employment.

Salus Mutual collects personal information about its employees for purposes of human resource management and administration.

Salus Mutual will always identify the purposes for which personal information is collected, before or at the time of request.

Definitions

Collect: means to gather, receive, or record personal information from any source and by any method.

Customer: means a current or former insured, an applicant for insurance, a claimant under one of our policies, as well as an individual insured as part of a group or corporate policy.

Disclose: is to make personal information available to a person other than an employee of Salus Mutual or its authorized representatives.

Personal information: refers to any information about an identifiable person, including but not restricted to personal employment files, performance appraisals, security information, benefits, and medical information. It also applies to customer and supplier information. It does not include the name, title, business address, business telephone number, business fax number, or a business email address of an employee of an organization.

Use: refers to the management of personal information by or on behalf of Salus Mutual.

Principles

Principle #1: Our Accountability for the Collection, Use, or Disclosure of Personal Information

All Salus Mutual customers have a right to expect that their insurer is accountable for the personal information it collects and uses.

We are responsible for maintaining and protecting personal information while it is under our control. This includes any personal information that may need to be disclosed to third parties for processing or other administrative functions.

To help ensure the confidentiality of personal information, we have established plans, policies, and procedures to ensure that we comply with PIPEDA.

We have designated a Privacy Officer who is responsible for our Company's compliance with the ten privacy principles developed by the Canadian Standards Association.

If you have any questions or inquiries about how personal information is stored, or when it may need to be disclosed to others, our Privacy Officer is there to assist and explain our policies to you.

Principle #2: Identifying Our Purpose for the Collection, Use, or Disclosure of Personal Information

Before or when we collect information, we will explain how we intend to use it. Salus Mutual collects personal information only for the following purposes:

- Establishing and maintaining communications with customers
- Underwriting risks on a prudent basis
- Investigating and paying claims
- Detecting and preventing fraud
- Offering and providing products and services to meet customer needs
- Compiling statistics
- Complying with the law
- Undertaking business or activities under applicable federal, provincial, or territorial legislation

Unless we are required to by law, Salus Mutual will not use or disclose any personal information that has been collected without documenting the new purpose and obtaining consent. If you have any questions about these purposes, our Privacy Officer will be pleased to explain them to you.

Principle #3: Obtaining Consent for the Collection, Use, or Disclosure of Personal Information

Salus Mutual will make a reasonable effort to make sure that our customers understand and consent to how their personal information will be used by the Company. In certain circumstances, consent with respect to use or disclosure may be sought after the information has been collected but before use.

Personal information may need to be collected, used, or disclosed without the knowledge and consent of the individual. For example, legal, medical, or security reasons may make it impossible or impractical to seek consent.

PIPEDA recognizes that when information is being collected for the detection and prevention of fraud or for law enforcement, seeking the consent of an individual may defeat the purpose of collecting the information.

Seeking consent may also be impossible or inappropriate when the individual is a minor, seriously ill, or mentally incapacitated.

In obtaining consent, the Company will always use reasonable efforts to ensure that individuals are advised of the identified purposes for which any personal information collected will be used or disclosed.

When using your information for new purposes, disclosing your information to new third parties, or making other significant changes to our privacy practices, Salus Mutual will obtain your consent.

You may withdraw your consent at any time, provided Salus Mutual is given reasonable notice, and subject to legal or contractual restrictions. We will inform you of the implications of your withdrawal.

Principle #4: Limiting our Collection of Personal Information

We will always limit the collection of personal information to that which is necessary for the identified purposes. Typically, this is information that is required to enable us to underwrite a policy of insurance and charge a fair premium. We may need to collect personal information from other sources including credit bureaus.

Under certain circumstances we need to collect information to assist us in adjusting or investigating a claim. This may involve the use of licensed and regulated independent insurance adjusters or investigators. We will always collect personal information by fair and lawful means.

Principle #5: Limiting the Use, Disclosure, and Retention of Personal Information

Personal information will not be used or disclosed for purposes other than for which it was collected, except with consent or as permitted or required by law. Personal information will be retained only as long as it is necessary to fulfill those purposes.

There are situations where Salus Mutual may disclose a customer's personal information as dictated by prudent insurance practices. For example:

- Risk-sharing: As part of the underwriting and claims handling process, property and casualty insurers transfer personal information to other insurance companies, including reinsurance companies which share in the risk. This would include situations where the customer has made a fraudulent application for or renewal of a policy of insurance.
- Information services: Property and casualty insurers disclose personal information for underwriting, claims, and classification and rating purposes.
- Insurance services: Property and casualty insurers disclose personal information to businesses that provide goods and services to insurance companies and/or their customers, such as data processors, loss control managers, and claims adjusters.
- Insurance intermediaries: Property and casualty insurers may disclose personal information to their insurance intermediaries, such as agents.
- Only the information necessary for these services will be provided by us to these service providers.
- Salus Mutual does not provide or sell its customer lists to any outside Company for use in marketing or solicitation. Only employees with a business "need to know," or those whose duties require it, are granted access to personal information about our customers.

We keep personal information only as long as it remains necessary or relevant for the identified purposes or as required by law. Personal information that is no longer necessary or relevant for the identified purposes or required to be retained by law is destroyed, erased, or made anonymous.

Payment Processing

Salus Mutual may disclose personal information such as names, billing addresses, and payment details to a third-party payment processor for the purpose of processing premium payments or other transactions. We ensure that any third-party payment processors we use are contractually obligated to protect your personal information and may only use it for the specific purpose of completing your transaction.

We have implemented security measures with these processors to safeguard your data and ensure compliance with PIPEDA and other applicable privacy laws.

Principle #6: Keeping Personal Information Accurate

Salus Mutual makes every effort to ensure that personal information about its customers is as accurate, complete, and up to date as is necessary for the purposes for which it was collected.

This may require contact with the agent or customer service representative to confirm or update personal information required for underwriting purposes. In addition, the Insurance Act and the terms and conditions of a customer's policy of insurance may require the customer to notify us of material changes to their personal information.

If a customer has any questions about the accuracy and completeness of the personal information that we have collected or retained, they may contact our Privacy Officer. If a customer needs to update some aspect of their personal information, we ask that they contact their agent directly.

Principle #7: Safeguarding Personal Information

Salus Mutual takes steps to protect personal information with security safeguards appropriate to the sensitivity of the information.

Specifically, we have stringent security measures in place to protect personal information against such risks as loss or theft, computer hackers, unauthorized access, disclosure, copying, use, modification, or destruction. Salus Mutual protects personal information regardless of the format in which it is held. We also protect personal information we disclose to third parties by contractual agreements stipulating the confidentiality of the information and the purposes for which it is to be used.

All our employees with access to personal information are required as a condition of their employment to respect the confidentiality of personal information.

Principle #8: Openness Concerning Our Privacy Practices

Salus Mutual pursues a policy of openness about the procedures it uses to manage personal information. We will make specific information about our policies and practices relating to the management of their personal information available to customers upon request.

We ensure openness by providing employees and customers with the following information:

- The address of the Privacy Officer accountable for our compliance with the policy and to whom inquiries or complaints can be forwarded
- The means of gaining access to personal information held by our Company
- A description of the type of personal information held by Salus Mutual, including a general account of its use

Salus Mutual makes information available to help our customers exercise informed choices regarding the use of their personal information.

Principle #9: Customer Access to Personal Information

Salus Mutual informs its customers of the existence, use, and disclosure of their personal information upon request and provides access to that information. Our customers are able to challenge or correct the accuracy and completeness of their personal information and have it amended when appropriate.

When a request is made in writing, we will inform the customer in a timely fashion of the existence, use, and disclosure of their personal information and they will be given access to that information. In order to safeguard personal information, we may require the customer to provide sufficient identification information to permit us to authorize access to their file.

In certain exceptional situations, we may not be able to provide a customer with access to all of the personal information we hold. Exceptions may include information that is prohibitively costly to provide, information that contains references to other individuals, information that cannot be disclosed for legal, security, or commercial proprietary reasons, information that is subject to solicitor-client or litigation privilege, or, in certain circumstances, information of a medical nature. If this is the case, Salus Mutual will provide the reasons for denying access upon request. Customers can obtain information or seek access to their individual files by contacting our designated Privacy Officer through the contact information provided below.

Principle #10: Challenging Compliance

A customer has the right to challenge Salus Mutual's compliance with the above principles by contacting the Privacy Officer accountable for our compliance with the policy.

Salus Mutual maintains strict procedures for addressing and responding to all inquiries or complaints from its customers about its handling of personal information. We inform our customers about our privacy practices as well as availability of complaint procedures.

Our Privacy Officer will investigate all complaints concerning compliance with the Privacy Policy. If a complaint is found to be justified, we will take appropriate measures to resolve the complaint including the amendment of our plans, policies, and procedures, if necessary.

In exceptional circumstances, the Privacy Officer may seek legal advice before providing a final response to individual complaints.
